

Liability Insurance for Podiatrists

Protecting your career

The term medical misadventure puts a chill into the heart of any medical practitioner. The concept of fighting legal action based on the quality of your advice can be particularly intimidating, even if you're sure you made the right recommendation.

And when you're busy "defending" your advice, how are you going to continue to run your business?

Who will be responsible for paying the bills, managing your staff and running the practice?

Although it's preferable not to end up in a liability situation, it's important to have peace of mind if you do.

What is covered?

The package includes cover for Professional Indemnity, Public Liability, Employers Liability and Statutory Liability:

- Professional Indemnity

Cover is crucial for any medical practitioner, or those involved in providing professional advice to their clients. The policy covers legal liability, which may arise from giving negligent advice or from a breach of professional duty. It also covers legal costs and expenses associated with defending a claim

- Public Liability

Covers general liability for property damage or bodily injury happening in connection with your business

- Employers Liability

Covers your liability as an employer for injury to employees that falls outside the scope of ACC

- Statutory Liability

Cover against fines or penalties imposed for unintentional breaches of certain statutes
